

Published based on Best Deals On Golf Clubs

Best Deals On Golf Clubs

We all know that the first rule of non-professional golfing is that all bad shots can be put down to the clubs. The second rule is that the fastest way to boost your game is buy new clubs. OK maybe we know this is not a very rational approach to improving our game but almost everyone are looking out for that next great driver or putter to put us ott right?

But men's clubs can get pretty pricy. Is there a technique to get a deal on these things? Of course there is .

The best deals on golf clubs occur when a new model is announced. In contrast to the auto industry, club manufacturers update their clubs often. When the most recent and best model is published, that club you had your eyes on now becomes overstocked inventory. It's possible to get it for a third off, or if you can wait 2 months, you can get it for as much as 66% off.

If you do not mind used clubs, and while they're in good shape why would you, there are some absolute takes available. The least expensive place to get used clubs is at a yard sale. Real life story. I got a hardly used Callaway Huge Bertha II with head cover for $10 at a yard sale. Why the low price? Because I purchased it from the better half. The husband was out playing golf and left the sale to his better half.

Yes this takes a little time but there are real diamonds in the coarse to be found if you're employed at it. Test your local paper or online classifieds like Craig's list for times and locations.

Another trustworthy source for used clubs can be found online at the larger club manufacturer and retail sites. Manufacturers will have "demo" clubs for sale and the retail sites often take trade-ins when they sell new clubs. These sites are frequently a source of wonderful buys and have the additional value of coming with customer service which naturally the yard sale does not.

Don't thumb your nose at the large box stores. You won't find top of the line clubs there but often time's you will find lower end clubs that are either unique (like my $40 Dunlop nine wood from Target that I would not sell for $400) or merely amazingly priced.

If you know precisely what you want and you have got some patience, it is possible to get a heck of a deal on men's golfing clubs.

You can also find this article published on Best Deals On Golf Clubs, and on the tag pages club manufacturer , demo clubs, Golfing, line clubs, Model, yard.