Best Sellers In South Africa This World Cup

South Africa became the first African hosts of the World cup in 2010 and next up we will be in Brazil in 2014. Vuvuzela was definitely one of the biggest selling items in the World cup in South Africa even though there were complaints from people about the noise. Others being flowers and alcohol of course. Promotional merchandise of countries participating in the tournament was also not far behind. Several business dealing with flowers made a lot of money by having send flowers online service which people can use and send their loved once back home.

There were noises at the start of the campaign where a lot of people wanted Vuvuzela to be banned from the stadium but that wasn't to happen, though what did happen is that they built a new Vuvuzela with less noise. The complaint vanished after few days and everyone started enjoying other than complaining. Almost all fans from African nation had vuvuzela in their hand especially South African fans. They were dancing and singing, the atmosphere was absolutely amazing.

When there is football, there is alcohol. Especially when it comes to going to a hot country, even though it was winter there the weather was still warm for us Britishers. It's just a shame that the football team cannot perform. Alcohol probably takes the poll to be honest of being the most sold items in the World cup, I don't think any other product can beat alcohol.

There was a lot happening out there, people were getting married left right and centre well I went to few. This is a fantastic time to propose to someone you love I feel. You will be surrounded in great atmosphere and a lot of people would be happy. I was invited to a wedding ceremony of a couple who I met in the plane. I did not find nice wedding flowers so I bought and changed birthday flowers into wedding flowers and presented them with best of wishes. Fans from all around the World joined in, it was an ecstatic ceremony.

So Flowers, Alcohol and Vuvuzela are definitely up there in top sellers on the World cup.
