Humor can result when players are unaware their status as an offensive or defensive player suddenly has changed. These random events cause some people to consider football funny due to some of the bloopers and unexpected miscues that result.

Ocasionally, during the course of a football game, an offensive player loses control of the football and gravity seems on hold as players contort their bodies in all directions in efforts to gain control of it. Simply defined, a fumble occurs when the player in control of the football loses that control. In most such instances, the football is jarred from the player's hands and drops to the playing surface of the football field. It now is considered a loose ball, and whoever picks up the ball gets possession of it and a chance to score. To the onlooker, the game might appear out of control as players dive, duck, and scramble to control the loose ball.

It's not uncommon for players pursuing possession of fumbles to kick the ball, sending it in unexpected trajectories. Somebody else may try to pick it up and be unable to get their hands on it, so another person might dive for it, knocking it around again.

Sometimes the ball can go in and out of the hands of five, six, or seven players, forcing grown men to jump, dive, and hop around trying to gain possession of the ball.

Interceptions are the source of many bloopers when teammates proceed ahead, oblivious to the interception that might have changed the course of the game. Sometimes, one player accidentally can tackle one of his own teammates thinking it's a player on the other team who has the ball. Funny to some, these unexpected plays can be dangerous and provide no pleasure for football players as a whole. These types of chaotic bloopers make football funny in addition to making it exciting to watch.
